Onondaga Land Rights, filed March 11, 2005, is dismissed by U.S. District Court Judge Lawrence E. Kahn, citing a "readily identifiable disruptive nature" of the Onondaga Nation's claim. Further suggesting he had no alternative, Judge Kahn states: "Sherill, Cayuga and Oneida foreclose any possibility that the Onondaga Nation's action may prevail, the Court is bound by these precedent to find the Nation's claim equitably barred and subject to dismissal."

Neighbors of the Onondaga Nation (NOON) is a grassroots effort of Central New Yorkers. We support the sovereignty of the Onondaga Nation's traditional government, their Land Rights Action and we collaborate with them on environmental protection and restoration. We join in the Onondaga Nation's call for justice, reconciliation and healing. We believe that we, and the wider community, have a great deal to learn from the Onondagas about living more peacefully with one another and more harmoniously with the Earth. New York State takes 79 square miles (50,560 acres) of the Onondaga territory. Onondagas believed that they were leasing land to New York State, not selling it. The Trade and Intercourse Act requires Congress to authorize in advance any negotiations carried out by a state. The act states "that no sale of lands made by any Indians, or any nation or tribe of Indians within the United States, shall be valid to any person or persons, or to any state, whether having the right of pre-emption to such lands or not, unless the same shall be made and duly executed at some public treaty, held under the authority of the United States."		ce any negotiations ren act states "that no frie andians, or any nation ate United States, shall lersons, or to any ght of pre-emption day s the same shall be gua some public treaty,	news peace and endship between U.S. d Six Nations. The Six tions give up claim to ads west of modern y Buffalo, but are aranteed lands east d north of there. New York State "buys" more than 96% of the Onondagas' land about 2 million acres from the Onondaga Nation. Onondaga territory is reduced to about 108 square miles, including a one-mile strip around Onondaga Lake. The "treaty" followed a private effort to buy land and was made with Onondagas without authority to negotiate for their people. New York Governor George Clinton promised, "this tract is to remain with the Onondagoes (sic) forever. Our people will know that they cannot get any Part of this Tract and therefore will not attempt it."		ion. north of e miles, tory is n denosat to discu te for was rejectom- quickly (sic) redress.	aty of Fort Stanwix cedes Haudenosaunee land th of the Ohio River to the U.S. (Onondaga terriy is not affected.) During treaty negotiations Haunosaunee leaders were taken hostage. In a meeting liscuss ratification of the treaty in 1786, the treaty is rejected by the Six Nations government, which ckly began appealing to the U.S. government for ress. This treaty followed an unsuccessful attempt New York Governor George Clinton to negotiate d purchases from the Haudenosaunee.		U.S. War of Independence ends with victory over England.	During the American Revolution, colonial soldiers burn Onondaga villages, killing at least 12 and taking 34 prisoners. An Onondaga chief recalled the incident: "When They came to the Onondaga Town (of which I was one of the principal Chiefs) They put to death all the Women and Children, excepting some of the young Women that they carried away for the use of their Soldiers, and were put to death in a more shameful and Scandalous manner; Yet these Rebels calls themselves Christians." (Council at Niagara, December 11, 1782, in The Haldimand Transcripts (Series B), The Public Archives of Canada, Ottawa, B.119, p. 172.) Meanwhile, General John Sullivan invaded other Haudenosaunee lands burning cornfields and homes. His forces retreated after their assault. These actions encouraged many of the neutral Haudenosaunee to side with British forces in the War of Independence.
